The cottage home of Mrs. Belle Scotten of Fayette was partly destroyed by fire Sunday morning. The fire company did good work and saved the structure from entire ruin. There was $2,400 insurance on the house and contents.

One of the most disastrous fires ever occurring in Fayette was the destruction of the splendid yards of the La Crosse Lumber Co. Sunday afternoon. The alarm of fire was given at 2 o'clock and in an incredibly short time the flames had enwrapped a large territory of the dry lumber and sheds. The fire was evidently caused by the explosion of a can of linseed oil in the oil room, because the spread of the blaze was lightning like. The LaCrosse people saved all of their books. The fire department did their noblest, but were unable to save anything on account of the intense heat.

LINN.

Every day is a big day at the Brookfield fair.

The Christian church revival at Bucklin begins August 12.

Paul Dungan of Clarence is a young forger. Young Dungan forged 13 checks on Ed Cox, drawn on the Shelby County State bank, the first one dated June 12. The bank authorities were uncertain as to the signature, but on comparing the forgery with Mr. Cox's signature, they failed to detect anything suspicious. Recently the checks, coming in so fast, made them send for Mr. Cox who declared the forgery. The lad was placed in jail at Shelbyville.

Sheriff H. N. Graves and Jack M. Williams, both of Macon, livened up things in that city Monday by a spirited fist scrap. They were, of course, discussing politics and failed to agree. Graves taunted Williams with the fact that he had accepted a bribe to vote for him as sheriff. Williams confessed to accepting the bribe, but says he did not vote for Graves. Williams is a cripple. Graves refused to plead guilty, but Williams did and paid his fine of $9.25. Graves will be tried.

A colored man from Keota appeared before Recorder Stacy Monday, along with a girl of the same race, and asked for a marriage license. He said the girl was 17.

"She's too young," said the recorder. "In such case the law requires the consent of the proper parties."

"We got that," said the groom-to-be.

"You have!"

"Yes, sah."

"Who's consent have you got?" "Me and Sallie—we've both consented. We're the proper parties."

"Well, you won't do. You've got to see Sallie's dad and mam and see what they think about it. If they say 'yes,' then you come back here and I'll fit you out with a brand new set of license, summer style, warranted to stand all sorts of weather."

The lover said if he'd known there was that much red tape about getting married he never would have gone a wooing.
